Four Days' Fair.

Four Nights' Enter:ainment.

Under the auspices of James L. Bates Camp 36, S. of V., and Ladies' Ald Society M. S. 31, an interesting four days' fair was opened in Old Fellows' building. East Weymouth, Tuesday night.

The hall presented a very attractive appearance with its many decorations of faars, banners and bunting draperies. There were the usual table attractions and alberal patronage was bestowed on them all. Mrs. Lottle Staddard presided at a table of dolls which was admired by the younger ladies. A lemonate table in charge of Miss Florence Loring came in charge of Miss Florence Loring came in charge of attention. Reynolds Relief Corps had a well-stocked variety table presided over by Mrs. Margaret Cully. Mrs. Prescott Nash had charge of a dimer table long of the Carleton Drown, assisted by several of the young men of the class. A nong those present were:

11 (4) 1642 ness rather than malignity, but there is altogether too much of that which borders upon hooflumism in our community. Baseball playing on Sunday afternoon and vandalism at night pave the way to the reform school and the states prison. We want our boys to have all the fun that is good for them but more than that we want them to grow up to be useful, law-abiding citizens. Rolling the cannon balls down from the soldlers' monument is fun but not just the right kind of fun. We hope this will be a word to the wise.

three days Ford Asheroft, editor o sland tonight.

Samuel Reed

BY IDA KENNISTON.

B the popular Nowa-Days Magazine, has been kept at home by a wretched cold. To-day he felt almost himself again, but a whisting, diving snowstorm, a litere bilizard, such as sometimes strikes New York in the latter part of February, was raging, and forbade him to venture out. Tired with the unwonted inaction of the past two days, the editor's thoughts turned to his work, and he began to consider the makeup of the number now in preparation.

"I'm not quite statisfied with the May number," he murmured. "It's a little heavy for May; there ought to be more of the light and life and blossoming of May in it. Now, those 'Pastelles'—we haven't any really good apring story in them."

The "Pastelles," a new department of the magazine, were short sketches, with hardly plot enough to be called stories; senetimes a light character study—a deletate word painting of some aspect of nature.

He has given that same May number much previous consideration, but as yet has been unable to get the issue into the shape which he wishes it. Tred Asherott has the reputation of being a careful editor, one who studies the demands of the public, and the Now-ADAys Magazine has the reputation of being the best on the market for that very reason. It is always timely, and that is what attracts the public. It never prinsit a Christinas story in July, but its contents are always appropriate to the season. It is of that very reason that Fred Asherott is giving it his attention to-day. The number that is just ready for the press lacks a timely story that it should have, one that savors of the spring flowers and kindred topics. So as the driving snow beats against his window the editor is thinking of the flowers of May, and wracking his brain to evolve a Maytime story.

Mr. Asherott took an art calendar from the wall by his aide and turned the leaves until he came to the May page. The picture was an excellent copy of a water color painting. It represented an orchard of apple trees, evered with their pink and white bloom. A young girl stood under one women. Brought up in a Quaker household, for Faith was an orphan and lived with her grandparents, a certain quaintness, a child-like simplicity and directness, made her seem unlike the other merry, chattering country nor, and he would find her waiting for him.

So, on this aftermoon, with the February storm raging without, Ford Ashreoft's thoughts went back and lingered on the springtime foly of those long ago years. Could it be 12 years—Faith would be 29 now, but somehow he could not think of her as looking much older than the young girl he had left in the orrhand. Surely she had not lost that pure, childlike face—shitte older, perhaps, a little sadder, but still with those innocent, wistful eyes. And he—while was 34; he had lived in the midst of the rush and whird of city life.

"It would make a good 'Pastelle,' he finally remarked, and turned to his desk, took up his pen and began to write. Slowly at first, then, as the past seemed to come near-

After awhile he took the pen and wrote again.

Lincoln Hall Crowded each Even-Pifty-Pirst Annual May Party of ing of Trinity Church Fair. cond Universalist Society.

old in Fogg's Opera House Last Friday Evening.—Affair Largely Attended and a Great Social Success. Good Talent and Well Laden Tables.

e Great Social Soccess.

The fifty-first annual May party of the Second Universalist Society of South Weymouth, was held in Fogg's Opera House, Friday evening last. The affair was given under the auspices of the Laddes Social Circle of the church, and was one of the most enjoyable events in the history of the society.

The party was in charge of Gordon Willis, E. A. Cushing, C. W. Hastings, George Benson, J. M. Whitcomb, K. H. Granger, A. B. Raymond, H. B. Chandler, F. F. Bullock, L. K. Jones, Elbert Ford, A. F. Ballock, L. A. Ones, Elbert Ford, A. F. Ballock, L. A. Ones, Elbert Ford, A. F. Ballock, L. A. Balnehard and Charles Thomas, and much of the success of the affair was due to their efforts.

The grand march started at 8 o'clock, and was led by Capt. and Mrs. C. W. Hastings, followed by sixty-two couples. The march was one of the features of the evening, embracing as it did, many new and novel features. Cushman's Orchestra furnished music and dancing was enjoyed until one o'clock by about 92 couples, the floor being under the direction of F. Hewhotok, Louis P. Curtis, Eugene Louis, Ritchle T. Howe and Willard Holbrook, Louis P. Curtis, Eugene Louis, Ritchle T. Howe and Willard Holbrook, Louis P. Curtis, Eugene Louis, Refreshmens were served during the intermission.

These parties were inaugurated in 1849, the Attractions. and Wednesday atternoon.
May 8 and 9.

The hall was fast fully arranged with tables and booths, prettily decorated and laden with an endless variety of useful and fancy articles. The tables were presided over by the following persons:

Confection——Misses Marguerite Foster, Mac Chesanan, Elise Foster.

Domestic—Miss Addington, Miss Stotley.

SUCCESSFUL FAIR.

Confection 1 — Misses Marguerite Free, Mac Chesanhan, Elise Foster.

Domestic — Miss Addington, Miss Stoddard.

Fancy — Mrs. J. S. Smith, Mrs. Davidson, Mrs. Laird.

Cake — Mrs. C. R. Trott, Mrs. Oliver Wolfe, Miss Minnie Gregg.

Flower — Misses Ida Hoffses, Mary Hunt, Addie Keating, Miss Badie Orr.

Tuesday evening's entertainment was incharge of Miss Agnes Hyde when Victor Hugo's romantic drama — Ruy Blas" was given before a large and enthusiastic audience. A synopsis of the play was given before a large and enthusiastic audience. A synopsis of the play was given on the programme and there is no need to enlarge upon it here.

Miss Hyde, as the Queen, was undonbtedly the star and both played and looked the part with royal success. She has appeared before Weymouth audiences many times and after each presentation more is expected from her and it is but fair to say that she always realizes these expectations. Beside the part which she took it must be remembered that the whole drama was in her charge and rarely indeed has any play been given here where the whole was so well done, each actor speaking distinctly and acting his part with zest.

The here, Ruy Blas, was played by John J. Walsh of Boston. He, also, is well known here as an actor of good billity and in this play his part of the Refreshmens were served during the in-termission.

These parties were inaugurated in 18-0, during the pastorate of Rev. J. N. Parker, the first one being held in Rogers' Hall, which then stood on the site now occupied by Vining block. They immediately sprang into popular favor and it soon be-came necessary to hold them in the Town Hall. They were held here for about wenty-five years and then for several years were held in Music Hall, South Weymouth.

John J. Walsh of Boston. He, also, is well known here as an actor of good ability and in this play his part of the noble minded lover of the Queen, who at last dies willingly so that he may keep even the breath of slander from smirching the fair name of the Queen, was taken with great skill. Unfortunately some prompting was necessary toward the last of the drama but the necessity of walting for the iness interfered very little with his acting which was always good particularly in the last act.

Don Salbuste, as played by Lincoln particularly in the last act.

Don Salluste, as played by Lincoln Bryant of Hingham, was a handsome and able villian, plotting evil until the last and dying dramatically, as a villian should, in a duel at the end.

Mrs. Tyndale, as the Duchess of Albuquerque, played the part of the haughty and arbitrary Duchna to the Queen to perfectly.

querque, played the part of the baughty and arbitrary Duenna to the Queen to perfect?

Miss Elizabeth Hyde, as Maid of Honor to the Queen, threw herself wholly into the part as she always does.

T. O'Dor, as Marquis de Santa Cruz, made a most effective Grandee of Spain and was applauded vigorously because of his thrist for revenge in the second act. The minor characters, the secretary, Gudled, the Grandees of Spain, the ladies in waiting and the little pages all did their best while on the stage and added much to the effect of the drama.

The costumes were hired and were magnificent. The ladies of course looked well in their courtly robes. The Queen and Duenna particularly (the one in white still with red velvet train and jewelled crown; the other in purple velvet) were striking figures. But the men! What greater transformation is possible than to take a man out of his nineteenth century clothes and put upon him the magnificent robes of the Spanish Court of past centuries? One wonders if those Spanish Grandees did not lay askide their gorgeous robes with regret and vaguatong lags for castles in Spain.

Spanish Grandees did not by aside their gorgeous robes with regret and vagadongings for castles in Spain. The dress was certainly marvelously becoming to all.

The stage setting was due, many rugs and draperies being used for decoratino, also some Spanish tapestries and embroideries and a lattice window, all of which lent a Spanish aspect to the scene. The only thing to be regreted was treating to the stage room, but in spite of this, Miss liyde is to be congratulated upon the success of her evening.

was of a higher standard than entertainments usually given by local talent. The first part consisted of the pathetic ones act play, "A Daughter In Law" with the following cast of characters: Lady be Montreville, Mrs. Incz Parlee; Sylolt, Miss Emily, A. Smith; Gwendoline, Miss Clara Hunt; Alice, the nurse, Miss Elizabeth Hyde. This was followed by the presentation of the side-splitting comedy, "Lend me Fve Shillings" by J. M. Morton with the following—cast—of characters: Mr. Golightly, David G. Donne; Capt Phobbs, Howard B. Burke; Moriand, Phobbs, Howard B. Burke: Moriand, artist, William H. Cronin; Capt. Spruce, John W. Ahearn; Sam, waiter, Frederick C. McDowell; Mrs. Major Phobbs, Miss Elizabeth Hyde; Mrs. Capt. Phobbs, Mrs. Incz Parlec As Mr. Golightly, David G. Doane was, Samuel of the lows Autressed H. Weer-

ing himself placed in the most embarasing positions, and his manner of extricating himself therefrom was very ingenius and excited much laughter.

Capt Phobbs, a man exceedingly jealous of his wife, furnished considerable amusement, and his duel with Golightly whom he suspected of paying attention to Mrs. Phobbs, was one of the features of the evening.

Mrs. Phobbs, was one of the features of William H. Cronin, as Moriand, "an artist, was well received, and sustained his part well, as did also John W. Ahern, who played the role of Capt. Spruce. Frederick McDowell made a capital waiter and was very zealous in attending to the wants of the guests.

Miss Elizabeth Hyde as Mrs. Major

Paster's Reception.

One of the most pleasing events in the history of the M. E. Church was the formal reception tendered to the new pastor, Rev. J. H. Allen, and his family last Friday, night. The vestry was a scene of beauty with its floral decorations, attractive tables decorated with pretty ware and crowned with dainty lunches. Owen S. Chandler was master of ceremonles and had as ushers, J. Q. S. Goodspeed, George Burns, Eugene Carter, John McIssac, Arthur Cunningham, Walter Tirrell, Charles Spear and James Faley. Rev. and Mrs. Allen, Miss Florence and Master Harold Allen were cordially greeted by a large number of people who gathered to give them welcome, and they were assisted in the reception by Mrs. Leavitt Bates.

During the evening a pleasing entertainment in charge of L. W. Bates was given. Mrs. G. W. Baker and Porter Pratt entertained with several plano duets and Stewart Mason grave voilin solos.

TO THE MAN WHO THINKS.

OOK yourself squarely in the face and see if you are not half ashamed to be without Ivory Soap in your house. Worse than this, your wife is without it. It is bad enough for a man, though a man often doesn't care how his comfort is mis-spelled. But a woman misses all these little helps to housekeeping. And Ivory Soap is one; its great potency makes it actually cheaper than yellow soap for general work. It floats.

"The thing that impressed me most was that in less than a month after the town started the 'diggings' was the elreulating medium, and valued at $16 an onnce, although no official assay had been made. Men go out with their rockers and pans, and come back to town, and eat and drink, and pay for it with the result of the day's diggings. There are numerous propositions to interest men of capital, such as a good water supply system, electric light plants, and the man who can lay a trolley system up to the mines for transporting freight and supplies has the greatest and surest business venture of all. These are now carried by pack trains and freight wagons. Dogs are also used, they being able to carry about 40 pounds each. The town has increased in five months from about 250 to 3,000 inhabitants, and it is thought when navigation opens in the spring there will be 30,000 or 40,000 people here. Coal is $75 a ton, lumber $125 per 1,000; yet people are building and settling here. Our new quarters are very comfortable—frame covered with corrugated iron. TO PROTECT TERRAPIN.

lill in Maryland Legislature Provi ing a Close Season Under Penalty. To prevent the diamond-back terrapin, that delight of epicures, from becoming extinct in Maryland, which furnishes the choicest specimen of this delicacy in the world, the State Game Protective association has introduced a bill for its protection. It provides that no person shall catch, trap or take in any manner in this state any diamond-back terrapin between April 1 and November 1 in each year, or of any size less than five inches long, under a penalty of ten dollars for each terrapin. The destruction of terrapin eggs at any time is prohibited under a penalty of not less than $25 fine nor more than $100. No person shall keep any diamond-back ter-$25 fine nor more than $100. No per-son shall keep any diamond-back ter-rapin, alive or dead, in any pond, in-closure or tank between April 1 and November 1, under a penalty of ten dollars for each tercapin so kept. The bill also prohibits the sale of terrapin or fish during the close season. The fish commissioners are exempt from fish commissioners are exempt from this net while pursuing their duties as fish culturists. Scientists may also be exempt by permission of the state game warden. The passage of the bill is assured. It will have the effect bill is assured. It will have the enect of greatly reducing, if not entirely cutting off, the supplies of Chesapeake diamond backs out of season, as it will close up the hundreds of ponds in which terrapin are secretly kept to supply the demand at any price of the hotels in New York, Philadelphia and Relitious.

Improvements in the speed of cer-ain trains on the Northern railway of France are attracting attention in Europe just now, says the New Yorl Tribune. The distance between Ca lais pier and the Nord station in Pari in pier and the Nort station in a state in it is 185.5 miles. Some trains make the trip in less than four hours, or at the rate of 50 or more miles an hour. One, which runs only four days a week, the Mediterranean train de luxe, cover the mediterranean train de luxe, cover and a state of the state of th the Meditranean train as law, ers the distance in three hours and a quarter, which is equal to 57 miles at a hour. This run is made without a stop. The fastest time made on a daily train on the Northern railway of France is three hours and a half or 53 miles an hour. One of the London newspapers, referring to the of France is three hours and a half, or 53 miles an hour. One of the London newspapers, referring to the topic, says that the nearest approach to this speed in England are these two: The trip is made from Paddington to Exeter, 194 miles, in 3 hours and 43 minutes, or at the rate of 52.2 miles an hour, and from Euston to Liverpool. 1931/2 miles, in three hours and three-quarters, or at the rate of 51.6 miles an hour. It is interesting to compare with these figures the running time of the Empire State express. This train covers 444 miles in eight hours and a quarter, which represents an average speed of 53.8 miles an hour.

Gardening in Alaska. American women cordu Two American women conducting to mission school on the Yukon, 1,500 miles from its mouth, tested the Alaska climate last year in kitchen garden climate hast year in kitchen gardening, beginning operations in the operground May 16. In spite of a lack of rain for two months and cold storms in midsummer, they harvested 256 bushels of potatoes, 500 cabbages, 85 bushels of turnips and a few bushels of carrots. The strawberry bed set out grew finely, but the crop of berries was destroyed by mice.

One of the strangest facts regarding the present war is that English and Boer have so intermarried in South Africa that in countless instances brothers are fighting against brothers, and fathers against their own sons. The United States imported more merchandise last year from every quarter of the globe than it took in 1898.

an incident which shows that this world is not all push and scrabble and that there are fliose who love to help a fellow man whenever opportunity offers. There are two kinds of men, one whose only idea of whenever opportunity observed by the States are those good, whole-solved gentlement of whose kind words and in poor health was slowly walking to a train; he appeared to be partially paralysed in one limb. The crowd was hurrying by him and several brisk business men crowded against document. William Wall, George Mrs. Coleman, William Wall, George Mrs. Coleman, William Wall, George to be partiany parayses:
The crowd was hurrying by him and several brisk business men crowded against him causing him to lose his balance and he fell on his knee from which position he seemed to find it difficult to rise. The jostling ones who caused his fall heeded him not but passed on; but just behind these came two other substantial looking considering and one said, "wait a minute" to his friend, and taking the man by the arm assisted him to rise and aided him to the far and up the steps with a kind, cheery work. It was good to see the arridons look of trouble give place to a sweet smile as the feeble man thanked his helper. As the gentleman retoined invious look of trouble give purishing town, and the sweet smile as the feeble man thanked his helper. As the gentleman rejoined his friend again—the latter said indifferently, "Who was that, someone you knew?" "40 no," was the reply, "but he seemed to be having a hard time of it and seemed to be having a hard time of it and ments of its nature ever presented in this ments of its nature ever presented in this town; all of the characters being well sustained throughout.

House Bill No. 1345 is as follows: "The sale or exposure or offering for sale of freerackers more than four inches in quarters of an inch i er, and of all firecrackers contain diameter, and of all interfaces of the supposition passage. We make no comment upon the bill at this time, other than to say that while some legislation is necessary to pro-tect the lives and limbs of our youth from us explosives, it would seem that this bill is not a proper one in many respects. The anger from gunpowder, for instance, is fully as much as most other explosives, and from a resulting fire, it is or Clark's trick was well planned senator Ciarks trick was well planned; and well executed and he is a legal. Sena-tor from Montana. Will it pay in the long run and will the people of his state vote to retain him in office?

The machine in politics was never so complete and dominating as it is today. We quote from this morning's Boston Herald the following brief editorial on Hanna's Senate" which seems very well "Almost every Republican senator is to be a delegate-at-large from his state to the national convention. They are the ones whom Hanna has selected to do the work of the convention. He knows them, and can depend upon them. In the early days of the nation candidates for President were selected by cascuses of congressmen in Washington. Hanna's system is a virtual—not necessarily virtuons—return to that custom. But we think that the senators will have a larger share in the business now than then. Hanna seems to have a poor opinion of members of the House. He cannot manage them as easily as he control senators. Some of them feel obliged to consult their constituents. If there were no House of Representatives, but only a Senate and a president, Hanna would be quite happy. Then he could govern the country with facility and dispatch."

"Why people do not go to church" has been the subject of debate at conferences and conventions for a long time and with all the discussion the problem is far from being solved. Weymouth is a fairly average town in the matter of church facilities and church attendance; we have nearly every denomination, or at least quite a variety, we have liberal preachers, conservative preachers and radical preachsented.

Charles Hawes, Commander of Reynolds particles and church attendance; we have nearly every denomination, or at least quite a variety, we have ilheral preachers; we have fine organs and good music; we have beautiful foral displays, and all that goes to make our churches attractive. Including the Union Church of Weymouth and East Braintree, we have over 6,000 comfortable sittings, and yet on a beautiful day like last Sunday less than 2500 of these sittings were in use and we have come to the conclusion that the reason "people do not go to church" is because they do not want to.

**Charles E. Cole who as man and boy occupied searly every position in the Globe Mational Bank and was in at its wrecking, has taken a sentence of cight years at Greenfield jall, and the sympathy of many people goes with him, which is all very well as far as it goes, but how about the unfortunate stockholders of the bank, many of whom had their little all invested in it and will suffer long after Mr. Cole's term of imprisonment has expired?

As we have arrived at the date of the expiration of the term of office of Postmaster James L. Lincoln of East Weymouth, people are warnly discussing the question of who will be his successor.

W. C. Earle and Heary I. Movell, are the contesting candidates. We are free to amit at this time of writing we do not know which of them will get it. The alarm from Box 23 Tuesday noon was for a lively blaze in the house of John W. Bates near Jackson square and in the apartment occupied by Mrs, Kilborn. The fire was a quick one and was the result of using naptha for cleaning purposes in a room where a gasoline stove was in use. The gas generated by the naptha exploded, and the immediate surroundings were immunediately enveloped in flames. The fire department responded as readily as could be expected with our present detached horse system, but good work had already been done by near-by neighbors. We Decen't Always Like to Sear Pectry About Misself.

"Grumply used to think that the finest thing in the world was to dress like a tramp, neglect to shave and dig around upon a farm that he owns not far from the city," said Smith, with a reminiscent grin. He was out there one day last summer on a vacation, and he invited me to pay him a visit. I accepted and hardly arrived when I was saked to put on a pair of overalls and help him hoe a field of cabbage that was near the house. I declined with thanks, but told him not to let me interfere with his labors. So he seized a hoe and started in, while I selected a shady spot where I could smoke and watch him swing his hoe.

"He had only been at work a few minutes when a couple of women drove along the country road and stopped where he was at work.

"Oh, look," exclaimed one. There is the man with the hoe! How romantie!

""Whose was the hand that slanted back this brow?" said the second.
""Whose breath blew out the light within his brain? continued the first.
"There is no shape more terrible than this! cried the second.
""With the emptiness of ages in his face?" exclaimed the first.
"That was the last straw. With a grunt of ra, Grumply threw down the hoc and field to the house, while I was carreful to have my laugh out before I faced him. He came back to the city with not, and I understand that the farm is on the market, his agent having orders to accept the first offer received." Is troit Free Press.

the Dutch farmers and the Engins since We think of South Africa to-day as of a country of great distances, of long stretches between the struggling little villages, and still greater distances between the cities of any size, and we are not entirely mistaken. Even to-day, nearly three-quarters of a century since the Dutch farmers started on their long trek, a journey from Cape Town to Kämberley is not to be undertaken too lightly, and a journey sint Natal is even longer. But to-day much of South Africa is girdled with railroads, and if a journey of many hundreds of rules is not to be considered lightly now, what must it have been in 1857.

And so the trek began. Louis Trichard

And so the trek began. Louis Trichard And so the trek began. Louis Trichard was the first. He was a man of violent temperament, whose hatred of the English was so open that he was believed to have incited the Kaffirs in the war of 1841-35. A reward was set upon his head, and he found it advisable to leave the Cape Colony. Another party of Boer trekkers, under the leadership of Petalketic, let the colony a little later. With this expedition was Paul Kruger, a boy of ten years, the present president of the Transvaal republic. Another mem ber of the little band of pioneers was Marthinus Oosthuyse, the hero of an adventure that has no parallel in the most improbable fiction.

On the day on which the treaty was signed Dingaan invited his guests to attend a farwell feast in his own kraal that evening. The Boers accepted, but when they attempted to enter the kraal with their guns the Zuichieffair objected and asked his visitors to leave their weapons outside. The Boers demurred at first, but Dingaan told them that was were out of takes a such a gathering

While the barbarie banquet was at its height Dingaan rose to his feet, and, holding a gourd in his hand, said he would toast his guests. Then he uttered the fatal words "Bulala Abotagati!" ("Kill the white devils!"); and before the Boers had a thought of danger a thousand warriors fell upon them with assegais and clubs. Not soul survived.

But the masseare of Retief and his men was only a part of Dingaan's diabolical plan. That same night he marched away with a large army toward the main encampment of the Boers. At midnight the Zulu impi (war party) fell upon the sleeping Boers, and another slaughter followed. Men, women and children were butchered. In the confusion of the fight, and aided by the dark and another slaughter followed. Men, women and children were butchered. In the confusion of the fight, and aided by the darkness, 14 men and boys escaped, and made their way to a small hill, on the summit of which they improvised a laager, or fort. The Zulus followed them in the morning, but the little handful of Boers repulsed assuit after assault, until their ammuniton was completely eshausted.

At this critical moment a white man was seen riding in the rear of the Zulu lines. It was Marthinus Oosthuyse, who had just returned from a three days hunting trip. The beleaquered and desperate Boers signaled to hun that they were out of animum tion, and he rode back to the scene of the massacre, a mile away, where he loaded him self with prowder and believe in a million that he could ride through the lines. But Marthinus Oosthuyse calmiy took this chance. With superhuman courage he spurred his horse against the living wall. The air was black with a storm of assegais and spears. Great clubs were swurs at his horse. But steed and rider hore charmed lives. They broke through the barrier, dashed up the slope of the kop and were safe.

The savages, frenzied at this escape, swarmed up to the very stones of the laager; but the Boers had been imbued with new strength and fought like demons. The blacks were cut down like wheat by the fire from the deadly rides in the hands of the Boers. The savages fought until hundreds of their dead were heaped upon the veldt. They fought all day; and when night came they withdrew to a safe distance, where they waited and watched. But that same night that the same of the sam

We best can see the sun, Up rugged steeps, in life's hard ways, Are noblest victories won.

The iron plowshare's shining blade More fertile makes the field; The grain that's hardest threshed, in t Most precious harvests yield.

Down mountain heights, o'er stony beds, The purest waters flow; Each saintly life, each conquering hand, The cross of pain must know.

To spirits grieved and hearts that ache The aweetest songs are born; The nightingale in darkened cage Sings first to greet the morn.

From the fair bloom the foot has crushed Fragrant perfumes arise; Pair are the visions Heaven grants To dim and sightless eyes.

GOMETHING struck the vicar in his daughter's appearance that day He was a grim man, and generally he remarked little that did not concern his work. Her eyes sparkled and she was full of some mystery. He was reminded of her childish days when she used to prepare "surprises," and he thought as he looked at her that after all she was not much changed by lengthening of frocks and twisting her hair up.

Then he retreated once more into himself.

he broken. She was splendidly healthy, and this perhaps made it easy to be light-hearted.

Mr. North was a widower with a family of six, of whom Sibyl was the eldest. She kept house for him, and she helped the governess with the children's lessons. She played cricket with the boys in the field behind the house on the holidays. She mended stockings, she patched youthful knees, she knitted and she read to her father. She had always a lap or bosom to be cried on by the five-year-old boy or the six-year-old sister, and she could comfort either and turn their tears into smiles. She packed for the brothers when they went to school, and she hid a cake somewhere among their clothes to cheer their homesickness.

Mr. North was a silent man, who had given himself up to books. If was short in his manner, and his children regarded him with awe. Sibyl was looked upon as mediator, but mediation was little necessary, since all outhority was vested in herself and the governess. To Sibyl only did he show the warmer side of his nature. He liked to have her with him. He put into her willing hands much that was precious—and tedious, too—of his work, and she copied for him and made copious extracts. He seldom praised her in words. It was not his way.

"I should like a picture of you," he Sibyl stood on the beach and watched the sea. Her clothes were twisted round her by the gale, and her hat had blown loose and was slapping her in the face and dapping like ribbons. Every wave seemed to dig into the short as it broke with the crashing of a thousand guns and then rushed up the duating shingle. It tore the stones back with a grinding sound on its receding Burny stood in drops on Sibyl's face and her eyes twinkled. Her thoughts wandered.

From the study window she could see the waves beating on the shore. The vicarage stood on the Cornish coast. It was on the outskirts of a fishing village and four miles from a town. The smell of the sea and the taste of brine were in the air when presently Sibyl put down her work and went out.

William North opened the window and looked after her. He, too, noticed the smell of the sea. The air seemed full of spray, and the waves broke themselves on the shore with insistence. It was on the next day that Sibyl wore an air of mystery. Mr. North's birthday was approaching and the children were getting up a play. Instinctively he connected with this her sparkling eyes, that seemed of themselves to be chuckling over something, and a mysterious visit to the town. He remembered after ward her look upon that day.

The play progressed, William North unbent somewhat and quizzed the children as to the surprise they were getting up for him.

"But Sibyl's got a real surprise," said Maley, the youngest girl, blurting out in an excess of affectionate confidence part of the secret of her sister. Spray stood in drops on Sibyl's face and on the nap of her rough coat. Foam lay like yellow snow in a long line that was washed higher and high-

In the wild evening the glamour of the storm took possession of her. She was buffeted by the wind and wet by the spray till it seemed to be that the tempest awoke a kindred spirit within her. She would like to dash into those angry waves and help in the havoe of the night. How rapturous to be a mermaid, to dive through those monstrous breakers, to ride upon the crests of them, to throw yourself backward, thence with outstretched arms to turn and tumble and dance till you churned them to further foam!

She stood looking at the sea with a fascination that made her heedless of all but her fancies. Then her heart his sermon.

"What was that?" he said, aloud.

There was a silence in the house, and then a screaming. The women rushed from their quarters.

"The water's coming up the garden."

The maid who spoke was white to the lips. Mr. North went to the door and opened it. There was a sound in the garden that had never been there be-fore. It was the rushing back of the water. It flowed down in a flat sheet to the basin of the sea. "A tidal wave," said the vicar. "It will not occur again."

already."
The younger children elamored to be allowed to go teo.
"No," said Sibyl. "You, Willie and Mabey must stay with me. Tether's Point is too far for you to walk, besides it will not be high tide before your bedtime. Elsie, you can go with them if you like, but you must put on your strong begots, and tell nurse to tie my woolen scarf across your cheat." Willie and Mabey began to protest. Mr. North returned to his severe manner and silenced them. "Sibyl says no, and that is enough," he said. "Not another word."
Their mouths turned down.
"I think they might come down to the beach, sir," said Sibyl, seeing their disappointment. "It is only Tether's Point that is too far. Mabey, be good and ask father if you may come down with me for a quarter of an hour before going to bed."
Mabey shrank back behind her elder sister's skirts. "A tidal wave," said the vicar. "It will not occur again."
"I thought it was the end of the world," said the nurse. "It's a mercy the children were in. But where's the boys and Miss Elsie?"
The vicar threw up his arms. "Sibyl!" he said. "Sibyl! Where is Sibyl? My God, don't tell me she isn't with you!" The servants looked at each other in blank affright. No one had seen her. No one had heard her come in.
"Can't you answer?" said the vicar turning to them with such a frenzied look as not one of them will ever forget. They shrank back. The nurse began to sob.

Mr. North ran down the garden, splashing through the water that had

"Tether's Point. They are safe—but Sibyl. Oh, dear God, Sibyl, Sibyl!"
He began to sob. His knees shook. He wore no hat, and his gray hair was blowing in the wind. His long coat flapped around him. Some of the parishioners gathered on the shore. The servants ran to them. Old Tremlin said no boat could put out in such a sea—and if she could, what good?

"But, Miss Sibyl!" he said. "It can't be true! The Lord wouldn't let it"

The night was spent in search. Parties were quickly organized and sent out in both directions. From Tether's Point came the boys and Elsie.

"It washed up to within a foot of us. Did you all come out to see it?"

"Was Sibyl with you? Have you seen Sibyl?"

"Was Subyi with you? Have you seen Sibyl?"

They had not. With white faces they joined in the search. The pitiless sea fell back yard by yard, and with the dawn the wind dropped.

The vicar, a stricken man, raised his "Well, just as you like," said Mr.

North, crossly. He went to his study.
The wind was roaring round the house and the waves thundered on the shore. He settled himself to his work.
He dipped his pen in the ink and looked at the ruled paper before him. He a word, and finally canceled the whole

The house shook in the flerceness of the gale. A draft came from the chimney. Presently he heard the boys and Elsie starting. He heard their boots on the hall, and Elsie's "strong pair" creaked. Arthur ungallantly told her that they made his head ache. Mr.
North smiled dryly as he heard Elsie retort that they had been Arthur's before they were hers, and that they would be his still only that they ceased to fit him.
"And I'm not surprised," she added,
"though they're miles too big for me."
The door slammed on the argument.
Then he heard the pattering of Mabey and Willie and their excited voices alling for Sibyl.
"Coming, coming, coming!" sounded in her voice from upstairs. He heard her bounding lightly down with a jump at the last four steps. Then it struck him that he had spoken crossly to hereven though it had been on her own

The post brought a little packet to the vicar on his birthday. He opened it without interest. But it held Sibyl's photograph.—Chicago Herald.

Detective Mirrors.

A mirror may now be regarded as something more than a promoter of vanity, since it is often set to slo the work of a detective. By well-arranged mirrors shopkeepers can watch their customers, even when they turn their backs on them. Thus they save their costly stock, and avoid giving offense to honest buyers. One jeweler in the west end of London has caught several well-dressed culprits simply by the aid of the looking glass. Owners of street-corner coffee-stalls find the detective mirror very useful. Petty pilfering goes on briskly around such stalls. One London coffee-stall owner declared that he

Annual Gentlemen's Night of Monday Club Well Attended. BAKING POWDER

The members of the MondayClub scored The members of the Monday Club scores a decided victory at their annual gentiemen's night which was held in Fogg's Opera House. South Weymouth, Friday evening last. An affair under the management of this club is always looked forward to with much anticipation, and, not-withstanding the severe rain storm, the event was attended by a large and fashonable audience, coming from all parts of Weymouth, Braintree, and other towns. The entertainment was furnished by Mrs. Waldo Richards, reader and imper-sonator, and White's Orchestra. The exrcises commenced with a selection e orchestra, after which the president Mrs. Josiah H. Pratt, formally opened the exercises with an address of wel-come, and concluded by introducing Mrs. Richards. Mrs. Richards had entertained he members and friends of the Monday Club upon previous occasions, and her appearance this evening was the signal for a storm of applause. During the evening Mrs. Richards gave a choice and varied collection of readings.

The public summership of city gas plants, of street rallways, of steam railroads, is successfully maintained in England, Germany, France, New Zealand and other was then cleared for dancing which was At the conclusion of the entertainment refreshments of ices and cakes were served by T. BOER LAAGERS. Camp Defenses Formed from Wagon Placed Axie to Axie with Polca Outward.

In South Africa, whenever stravelers "outspan" for the night, they invariably form the wagons into a defensive work called a laager. Provided there are enough wagons, this is either square or oblong, the latter shape being preferred. When each ox is allowed 35 square feet the smallest laager that will hald the oxen is that formed by 69 wagons. These are formed in single rank in a hollow square, touching, and with their poles outward. This renders the improvised protection easily removed when when the proposed plans have been put into effect Norfolk square will be quite a Hon Thiovos Frustrated.

lie never asked himself what he meant or planned. He just lived on from day to day in a dull rage with fate, and the manager, and the utter hopelesaness of it all. He didn't want to love the brute's wife; and yet, and yet—life wasn't worth a cent without her—especially on a coffee plantation at the back of the Molukkos.

Kepler had lost his money in Java, and gauged the worth of his friends. So he had taken himself in hand, and determined that work was the order of the day; and at first he had set to with a will, and writen letters home to his mother, which she called "answers to prayers."

But the poor old lady would have lifted up trembling hands again, had she seen her boy standing by the crushing machine, with his hungry, miserable eyes fixed on his chief's wife.

"It can't go on," he said—"it can't! This new insult is too dreadful."

She looked round nervously. "Remember the coolies," she whispered.

"Ah! they don't understand—besides, the machine is making an infernal noise." Still her rebuke had shamed him, and he glanced at her guiltily. She had adopted the native sarong and cabaja; her fair hair was tied loosely with a ribbon—her bare feet twinkled in her little gaudy slippers. She prodded at the red slimy pulp aimlessly with her paper parasol. She really wished that he would go on talking. "Oh! do let us get into the shade!" he groaned at last.

She turned quickly, and they disappeared behind the glistening bushes. The coolies looked at each other and grinned.

"What's the good of it all?" he demanded, impetuously, when they were

"What's the good of it all?" he demanded, impetuously, when they were alone.
"I wish you wouldn't keep on asking riddles!" she retorted.
"Eva!"
He had never called her by her name before. He had not meant to do so now.

"Well, do talk sensibly," she pouted, with a petulant movement of her shoul-ders. Then her voice changed sudden-ly. 71 am in awful trouble," she fal-tered. tered.

As she stood under the shadow of the trees with her drooping red flowers he thought she had never looked so beau-

Then — as she looked away, he saw how her neck flushed darkly—"you know his temptations," she added. "Yes, yes, I know! I wish I could atrangle them," he replied, savagedy, yet a wild joy bumped and basged in his heart. If, after all, his chance were consing! his heart. If, after all, his chance were coming!

Sho drew very near, Her hand lay be-seechingly on his arm. "He says it is your fault," she whispered. "That he is injured—innocent; and—"
"And you believe him?"
"No! Ah, no!"
"Then I don't mind. Thank God, I can prove my case."
"And the children? Oh, the poor children!"
"Oh, bother the children!" is what he would like to have said, but didn't. The children were always getting in his way. Besides, they were just like the head manager.
Eva began to cry—miserable tears. "And things were going so well," she sobbed.

mobbed.
"So well?" He started from her and held her at arm's length. "Why, your life here is a hell!" he gasped, giving her a little shake.

"Oh, no! It is better since you came; sometimes I have been quite happy—and—"

"And?"—he bent down to look under the paper sunshade; he wasn't thinking much about the errors in book-keeping—"And?"

"It was Van Berg's last chance," she sighed, "and I thought he had taken it."

The under-manager straightened his back. "Yes, I thought he had takes it," he repeated, stupidly.

And they wandered on again through the sweet, prim coffee groves.

Eva was very quiet—fearing that the strong current of the man's passion would carry her whage she would not. And the man was only conscious that he wanted to take her in his arms—and mustn't. The sultry air had madnessin it, and they both remember that walk.

joined Eva in the beek gallery.
"Don't go on crying like that," he said, roughly.
She did not look up nor speak, ser even aob audibly. She was just a mute lump of humanity, with the leaven of happiness left out.
Kepler took the limp little hand and held it tenderly.
"Don't, dear!" he prayed. "You'll break my heart."
Shill she was alient.
Outside, the tangled stars hung in the blue stillness.

ome of the World's Great Novellat

With few exceptions, the world's great noveliats have been masters of the short story, says the International Monthly. They hammered at the short tory until they perfected it as a literary form as distinct and self-contained as a sonnet or a ballad.

They found that the ideal short story, like the ideal lyric, can deal with only one main emotion or experience—that the slightest irrelevancy is fatal—that every detail must be bound with living cords to the heart—that every word must bear on the creature; every man, be he but a street scavenger, is a whole bundle of men, and svery one of them of varying moods. Where is the chance to paint a man in a short story? At best there can be but a glimpae of one passing experience, one isolated emotion. Imagine "Tom Jones" in a single chapter, or "La Pere Goriot" in a conte!

A man and woman looked on listlessity, for they had seen it all so wearily often before.

They had got into the habit of strolling about together, these two, and of talking of all things under the sumbut especially of her husband.

She was the manager's wife and not at all in love with the big-mosed young fellow beside her. But the manager was a bully, and rough with women, and—there were other troubles.

At first the compassion in young Kepler's eyes had stung and shamed her. Then he fell ill, and she had tended him—soft-handed and low-voiced, though her husband raged or whimpered—and being so often near him it became a sort of comfort to feel that the aching slicisce between them was electric—with his pity and indignation, and with something else that pulsed like a third presence.

So she called the something sympathy—and the silence broke into whispers. And the woman's lot seemed harder when the man painted it before the retred eyes.

He never asked himself what he meant or planned. He just lived on from day to day in a dull rage with fate, and the manager, and thu utter the support of the presence.

He never asked himself what he meant or planned. He just lived on from day to day in a dull rage with fate, and the manager, and thu utter that the mean or crying like that, "be and the manager, and the conceils and the children and wept—a pittil bully—conquered. And the wader manager, rejoined Exa in the back gallery.

"Don't go on crying like that," he meant or planned, and thu utter that the mean or ryong like that," he meant or planned. He just lived on from day to day in a dull rage with fate, and the manager, and thus utter.

Still she was silent.
Outside, the tangled stars hung in the blue stillness.
"Eva," he whispered, "can't you trust yourself to me?"
She looked up at him. And her eyes were twin with the stars. She had never so nearly loved him as now, when she realized what hurting him would cost her, and a chill vision of the long future without him chight her breath for a moment. She threw out little fluttering hands.

Then, though knowing that she would repent when she had rung down the curtain, the good in her conquered for his aske—salmost against her will.
"Bon't, don't talk like that," she said. "You know better than anyone what my life here is. Yet I can't-leave my husband—because I love him."

And young Kepler dropped her hands and turned away. For he knew that she had spoken the truth. And after that nothing mattered—much.

So, when the "some one" came, the

He liked whist, but he wanted quiet game with some old friends who really understood the game, and not with a crowd of gossiping wmen who did not understand its first rule. "Doctor, what alls my daughter? ad a love disappointment of any kind? I know she has not." "Then, madan of gossiping women who did not understant its first rule.

"There it goes again, John. You just persist in making meselfish. You always want to atop any little plan I might have for your entertainment because it might cause a little in convenience for me. Mrs. Coke proposed to have six tables, and after some persuasion her husband made out a list of six of his old associates who could bring wives with them, and then handed the list to Mrs. Coke. She had on the meantime been making a list of 12 women who could bring the could be a list of 12 women who could bring their husbands. That made 18 couples with room for but 12.

"Why, John, I did not realize that you had so many close friends," said Mrs. Coke, as she gianced over her husband's list.

After some discussion it was arranged by cutting Mr. Coke's list down to two gettlemen and ladies, and his wife's list down to elderly lady, found pasted between the leaves four £5 notes, with a written state ment to the effect that the testator had no heirs, and "left the £20 to the person who found them in the Bible." men and ladies, and his wife's list down to ten.

"I am almost sure that Mrs. Potter and Mrs. Stevens will be offended because they are left out, but I shall tell them that this is your party," said the lady.

Appropriate prizes were purchased, a dainty luncheon prepared, and the evening of the party finally arrived. To Coke it was an evening of agony. His comfortable smoking jacket and slippers had to be discarded for a more appropriate costume, and it ground upon his nerves to see the way in which his wife's lady friends murdered the game. All rules were discarded; aces were of no value, and trumps were played with a lavishness that was truly distressing, and through it all was a din of conversation that was fairly distracting.

But the series of games were finally played. "What is an island?" asked the teacher, addressing her interrogation to the class in geography. "An island, ma'am." re-plied Johnny Broahead, a studious lad who had Porto Rico in mind, "is a body of land entirely surrounded by politics."

HINTS TO FARMERS.

Johnsons INIMENT t pay. Keep enough for your own us

Don't say farming is a failure because on have tried it without system or management. Remember it takes intelligent and industrious people with a thorough system and management to be successful One of the best poultry foods for inducing egg production is cow peas. They may be fed whole to adult stock or may be fed whole to adult stock or cracked for chicks. They are highly ni-trogenous and are superior to corn or wheat. Another excellent poultry food is rape, which may be grown on all kinds of soil.

If your corn ground is cold and heavy the fore part of June, and the plants ap-pear yellow and sickly, apply a little of it directly to the hill; if a little of t falls upon the plant, it will seldom sus tain any injury. The gain in the crop will probably be three or four times the cost Melons of all kinds require a light, warm and rich soil. That which seems best adapted to their growth, is a light 2000 lbs. or over in one desandy loam, with a previous sub-soil, and a texture susceptible of easy disintegra-tion and fine tilth. Pasture lands of this character usually produce abundantly, if limed or dressed with house ashes.

> One ton of hay cut while the stems and stalks are green and full of juice, will furnish more nutrition for all kinds of stock, than two tons after it has gotten overripe and become woody. The juices by this time pass beyond a digestible de-gree and merely fill the stomach without furnishing any food allments.

LONG-DELAYED PUBLICATION. iov. Bradford Devoted Twenty-Pit

Gra Bradford's famous "History

Ges Bradford's famous "History of Plymouth Plantation," sometimes erroneously styled "The Log of the Mayflower," which is now proudly sheltered by Boston's gilded dome, is, despite its age and wanderings, clear and as legible as print, and, withal, much of it is so fine that no type of ordinary size will reproduce it line for line, says Truth.

Since the days of printing, probably no author has waited longer for a publisher than did Gov. Bradford, or durnished more legible, precise and accurate copy when the allotted time came. Twenty-five years were devoted by him to writing this history, which, although well known at the time, and used and quoted from by several historians, mysteriously disappeared at the time of the American revolution, and was believed to be as irrecoverable as the lost books of Livy. In 1846, however, Bishop Wilberforce, of Oxford, made quotations from a manuscript said by him to be in the library of the lord bishop of London, at Fulham place. These were recognized some years later by an American scholar as probably of Bradford's authorship, and subsequent investigation identified the manuscript, which was for the first time printed in 1856, more than two centuries after it left the author's hands.

This immortal manuscript consists of 280 large folio pages, written on one side of the paper only, the whole strongly bound in velum; it was recently restored to the custody of the state of Massachusetts by the bishop of London.

UTILIZING OLD JOKES. Even Joseph H. Chonte the Fami Lawyer Finds Them Handy Occasionally.

In this era of new ideas and startling inventions old jokes still retain their youthful vigor, says the Philadelphia Saturday Evening Post. Nor are they confined to minstrel performers and monologue artists on the vaudeville stage. No less a wit than Hon Joseph Hodges Choate, the law partner of William Maxwell Evarts, and the present unbassades from this country to the ourt of St. James, recently found

There is no better way of educating the younger members of the family to habits of economy than to give each a flock of fowls, but in so doing they should be instructed to keep strict accounts and made to attend to all the details of management. Should the pountry or eggs be used in the family the young people should be paid for such, and everything should be paid for such, and everything should be paid for such, and everything should be hone in a business manner.

The best time for thinning fruits is as soon as it can be determined what specimens are injured by insects or by any other cause. The time for the apple, pear, peach and plum is early in July. The grape should be thinned as 8000 as
